THE STAGE IN JAPAN

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT OF THE COUNTRY'S THEATERS.

Art Is Ichikawa Danjiro, Ninth of the Name-Why Shakespeare's Plays Are Not Acted In Japan-Extreme Realism.

Acted In Japan—Extreme Realism.

Ichikawa Danjiro, Japan's most famous Thespian, is the ninth actor to bear his historic name. In 1600, the dawn of the dramatic evolution, it was first adopted by a talented man whose genius did much to raise the stage from crudity and disreputable surroundings.

The present Danjiro has rare histrionic power and marvelous agility as a dancer. Possessed of great versatility, he is equally at home in comedy, tragedy and female personation. He has an oval face, slightly oblique eyes, sensitive nostrils, a mobile mouth and a clear, sharp enunciation.

Visiting Danjiro in his dressing room is a mere monetary transaction. A czar on his throne is no more of an autocrat than this actor in his little kingdom back of the footlights. Four valets are constantly at his side, and the whole theater staff stands ready to answer his beek and call. Throughout a high priced visitor's interview he maintains a lordly bearing, upon which the most fulsome flattery has no effect. Upon several occasions he has shouted from his dressing rooms to the stage an order commanding the actors to lengthen the scene that he might enjoy another can ed from his dressing rooms to the stage an order commanding the actors to lengthen the scene that he might enjoy another oup of tea. At night when he leaves the stage stoor his profession is left behind.

At home Danjiro is a good representative of the Japanese gentleman. Meeting him then is quite a different matter. One he considers a commercial transaction, the other social, and demeans himself accordingly. He greeted us with three profound bows, each time touching the floor with his forehead. Through an interpreter he talked most entertainingly of his art, the history of the drama and the English stage. Concerning Shakespeare he said:

"I am often asked by Europeans why I have not played Shakespeare's plays. It is for this reason: All that have been explained to me put women too prominently in the foreground—make them all heroines—and that would not he exception that the vector of the stage of the seconted to the seconted to the seconted to the exception of the seconted to the seconted to the seconted to the exception of the seconted to the seconted to the seconted to the exception of the seconted to the seconted in the foreground—make them all heroines—and that would not be accepted on the Japanese stage."

Fame and success are not without their penalties. Danjiro has nearly 50 retainers of various kinds, and they, with their ex-travagant habits, easily manage to dispose of his $50,000 income of his $50,000 income.

Danjiro talked freely of the development of the drama in Japan and of the present condition of theatrical affairs. In Japan every actor's rank and salary are determined by a guild of his elders. Merit alone succeeds. Bridge jumping and well advertised divorce court records are not used as claims for recognition.

Each theater has several dependent tea-houses. Through them tickets in the shape of wooden billets are purchased, and snape of wooden biliets are purchased, and arrangements for tea and meals served during the play are made. Every one smokes. Children romp about the house and on the stage before the curtain during the intermission, and the demeanor of the audience is quite as interesting as the play. Charges are made in detail. The following is from a minor theater in Tokyo:

barbaric splendor seen. One play is very popular with foreigners on account of the introduction of trailing trousers, with two feet of cloth extending over the feet and worn in the shogun days, so that the subjects even while walking might have the appearance of kneeling to their sovereign sovereign.

Plays are usually the joint effort of a star, manager, scenic painter and a hack writer. The manager clips from newspa-pers accounts of a murder, fire escape or some heroic deed and submits them to the pers accounts of a murder, fire escape or some heroic deed and submits them to the star. A hack writer, at the dictation of the star, shapes the plot, and the actors are allowed to fill in their parts in order to show themselves to the best advantage. The result is a play of unequal merit, "confusion worse confounded" and more subplots than a dime novel. As might be expected from this method, cach actor keeps himself in the foreground; consequently there are several leading parts.

Realism is carried to an extreme. In the climax of a recent Japanese-Chinese war drama a new set of actors to play Chinamen was necessary every night. Blood was freely drawn, and they were battered about in a manner that aroused the wildest enthusiasm in the gallery, but was rather hard on the actors. Trick wigs, with a blood saturated sponge, concealed under the hair are used with good effect. In his death agony an actor wildly clutches his head, and, pressing the sponge, causes a stream of blood to flow down his face.—Lewis G. Stevenson in New York Sun.

Mad as a March Hare.

"As mad as a March hare" has been ex "As mad as a March hare" has been explained in two ways. According to one, the expression is a corruption of marsh hare, since in marshy districts the hares have less protection and are wilder than in forests. According to the other, March is the rutting season of the hares, and they are then wilder and more restless than at any other time. any other time.

Perseverance.

"Haven't had a peanut thrown into my trunk for more than an hour," complained the elephant.

"Well," said the monkey, "I wouldn't kespair. I'd just keep on sticking it out, old man!"—Indianapolis Journal.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

New York Stock Market.

New York, May 18.—Depression was quite pronounced in the forenoon stock speculation, the extreme low points being reached about mid-day. In the afternoon the trading was firm. The volume of business was moderate and the distribution indifferent, the dealings being almost entirely professional, aside from the transaction for foreign account Persistent selling of the international shares upon European orders was a discouraging influence in the early operations. St. Paul being chiefly active. Louisville and Nashville, however, scored the most important decline. The chief points of attack were the industrials and material declines in prices occurred in them on only moderate dealings.

WILD With Eczema

I was a sufferer for eight years from Eczema, but now am entirely cured. The paims of my hands were covered and badly inflamed; little white bilsters appeared, then would peel off, leaving a red, smooth surface, which would burn like fire and itch. On the inside of the upper part of my limbs, great red biotches would appear, and as soon as I became warm, the burning and itching would begin. Night after night I would he awake and seratch, and almost go wild. I got a box of CUTICURA, and a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, and after a few applications I noticed the redness and inflammation disappear; before I had used one box there was not a sign of Eczema left. I can truthfully assert that $2.00 worth of CUTICURA REMEDIES cured me.
